Q: MSO error when importing a custom shortcode from Dashboard I am trying to add a shortcode with a custom post type to my plugin so that I can use it anywhere on my website. I created a function in the functions.php file and added a simple post type. function test_shortcode() { add_shortcode(

'test_shortcode',
'test_shortcode_function' ); } add_action( 'init', 'test_shortcode', 1
); add_action( 'admin_init',

'test_shortcode', 1 ); add_action( 'admin_enqueue_scripts', 'test_shortcode' ); I am using a WordPress coder spencer to make sure things work. I added the shortcode to a plugin area and got an error when I click publish. The error says "The shortcode "test_shortcode" appears to be unregistered, or did not return a value. See test_shortcode_function() for more information. " Here is my test_shortcode_function: function test_shortcode_function() { return

---

"This is a test shortcode"; } I have no idea why this is happening. I have searched everywhere and cannot find a solution. I have searched a ton of other questions on this site, but for some reason none of them have helped me with this error. Thank you so much for your help!

Spontaneous apoptosis of cultured rat cortical neurons mediated by autocatalytic caspases. Caspases are postulated to be central mediators of programmed cell death (PCD) in vertebrates. In the brain, TUNEL staining is a useful method to identify apoptosis in the brain. In this study, we established cell cultures of rat cerebral cortex. These neurons died spontaneously in the absence of exogenous stimuli. The dead cells were positive for terminal deoxynucleotidyl transferase-mediated dUTP-biotin nick end labeling (TUNEL), TUNEL-positive cells were identified as apoptotic cells by staining with 3-methyladenine (3-MA) which blocks the autocatalytic activation of caspases. Caspase-3 like protease which was identified by 5-color flow cytometric assay (FACS) analysis, was not involved in the process of PCD in neurons.

Q: Custom Profile Fields Behaving Strangely In my WordPress theme I added a list of custom profile fields, which works and displays correctly on the user edit profile screen. However, one of these fields in particular acts a bit strangely. When users press submit their settings, their first field is empty, then the second, third, fourth, etc. fields are populated in order. I am using the example code from: A: It sounds like your custom profile fields are using the `profile_fields_values_add_profile_field.php` hook to add your custom fields to the profile edit screen. You may find that they're being stored in the database in an order other than you might expect. If you're calling the values via `get_user_meta`, you'll need to use the array passed to that function to get the order. You'll then need to create and populate a new array with the values in the right order.

Surgical Management of Osteoporotic Proximal Femoral Fractures.

Osteoporotic fractures of the proximal femur commonly occur in elderly patients. In a younger patient with an osteoporotic fracture, surgery is indicated for fracture stability and to preserve hip function. When a surgically treated osteoporotic femoral fracture is unstable, the risk of serious complications is increased. These complications include further hip fracture, infection,
